Hanscom Info Assurance team squashes 'Love Bug'

by Roy K. Heitman ESC Public Affairs

When the "love bug" tried to take a bite out of Hanscom last week, technicians from the 66th Air Base Wing's Communication and Information Division stamped it out quickly and effectively.

The "I Love You" virus is a self-replicating virus that swept around the world overnight, affecting military, commercial and personal computer users.

A Department of Defense official described it as a "worm" virus that spreads through e-mail like a chain letter.

If the attachment to the "I Love You" message was opened, the virus would trigger infected e-mails to everyone on the victim's personal address book.

The virus also attacks graphic "jpg" files. In addition, it transmitted usernames and passwords to a remote e-mail address.

It was detected by DoD in Europe May 4 and reached the United States later the same day.

"The first thing we did was shut down the e-mail server for everything coming to and going off the base," said Jeffrey Smyth, ACS Defense contract firm fixed-price manager, who is assigned to the Communication and Information Division. "Using the password file, somebody could get into accounts and remote access servers, and have access to all of your information.

"By comparison, last year's Melissa virus was relatively harmless because it only clogged the e-mail system," Mr. Smyth said. "This virus went into the system and modified some of your local hard-drive programs and after some time it would send out your password file. It was a virus with a Trojan horse."

More than 30,000 of the attachments were found on databases here with about the same number in- and outbound.

Because of the similarity to the Melissa virus, a call was placed May 4 to Microsoft to obtain a modification of the tool used to fight Melissa. This tool was used to go through the database here and delete the attachments to the "I Love You" message. In most cases, people at Hanscom saw only the basic message, without the damaging attachment.

Although e-mail was only down for about half an hour May 4, it was brought down again the following day because of the compromise of passwords. At that time, a task force here began using a version of software that would quarantine the new virus on all of the more than 140 servers on base.

Contamination was found on the X, R and U drives, which is accessible throughout the base. "We shut down the X drive Friday May 5 to rebuild it from a clean tape," Mr. Smyth said. "We backed off three days and used the previous Monday's backup to restore it."

Saturday, a new version of a Norton anti-virus software was obtained that would work on the original and the first eight variants. This was used by a team Sunday on all of the file and exchange servers.

By mid-morning Monday, e-mail and web connections had been restored throughout Electronic Systems Center. "We had a large back-up of e-mails and that overloaded the firewall," Mr. Smyth said. "We used part of the morning to modify the web firewall to allow some of those e-mails to come through."

"As service was restored Monday, we required a change of passwords for everyone here to restore the system security," said Roger Corey, chief of Information Systems. "We need to stress that people should never open attachments of e-mails from people they don't know or that may be suspect. Virus protection is only good for known viruses and there is always a new one coming along."

SFS prepares for National Police Week

by Senior Airman Jason J. Ide

ESC Public Affairs

The 66th Security Forces Squadron and local police will be celebrating National Police Week Sunday to May 20.

As part of this year's celebration the Security Forces Squadron will be holding several community events on base.

"The primary purpose of the 66th Security Forces Squadron Police Week activities is for local police and Security Forces to get involved with the community to show support in a positive, nonthreatening way," said Staff Sgt. Stephen Sparks, 66th Security Forces Squadron, the event coordinator.

"Through Police Week activities like the police vehicle parade and the static displays, we can let people know we're here to keep them safe, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year."

"It's a chance for us to raise the security awareness of the base populace," said Sergeant Sparks.

The week's activities begin Tuesday with a car wash, held at the Heath and Wellness Center, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and another one Thursday. A sausage, hotdog and hamburger sale will also be held at the HAWC on both days from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

"A donation to the 66th Security Forces Squadron Defender's Club gets your car washed by Hanscom's finest men and women," said Sergeant Sparks.

Also Tuesday and May 19, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. weapons, D.A.R.E. and crime prevention displays will be held in front of the Base Exchange.

The Battle of the Badges softball game between the SFS and the Fire Department will be at softball field #4, behind Bldg. 1530, Wednesday from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

The 66th Security Forces Squadron, along with their fellow police departments from around the state, will culminate the week with a police vehicle parade.

The parade will be held May 20 from 10 to 11 a.m.

Anzalone farewell today

by 1st Lt. David L. Englin

ESC Public Affairs

Hanscom will say farewell to Col. Chris Anzalone, 66th Air Base Wing commander, with an Island Party Pig Roast at the Aero Club hangar at 12:15 p.m. today.

Col. Anzalone will hold an Air Base Wing Commander's Call in the Aero Club hangar before the party at 11:30 a.m.

Military people are encouraged to wear battle dress uniform pants with Hawaiian shirts, or to be otherwise creative. Dress is casual clothes for civilian personnel.

In addition to two roasted pigs, the menu will include beef brisket, coleslaw, baked beans and other traditional barbecue foods, as well as cold drinks.

This event is free of charge and has been designated an alternate duty location for all Electronic Systems Center and 66th ABW people.

JAG reflects on legacy of Asian-American service

by Col. Lester Katahara Staff Judge Advocate

(Editor's note: The following is a transcript of remarks made by Colonel Katahara at the Asian-Pacific Islander Heritage Month Kickoff May 2.)

The theme for this year's Asian Pacific Islander month is Voices of the New Millennium. I'd like to spend just a few minutes talking about the voices of the last century that left us all a legacy of service.

In January 1942, after Pearl Harbor was attacked, our country was blinded by the fog of war and many questioned the loyalty of Americans of Japanese descent.

Unfortunately, there were racist officers such as Gen. John L. DeWitt who led the evacuation of the Japanese from the west coast, both foreign nationals and American citizens.

Hawaii presented a bit of a different problem. It had a population of around 450,000, the Japanese composed the largest minority (35 percent) with over 160,000.

They were both educated and common laborers, so much of the infrastructure of the islands was supported by them and mass evacuation would have been a logistical nightmare. It would have paralyzed basic services, and it would have torn the melting pot society apart.

Thus, evacuation was not a realistic option. After the attack, all national guardsmen were on alert and pitched in to support the war effort, including the Japanese Americans.

Still fearing disloyalty, the government relegated the Japanese American soldiers, who were called "nisei," to a corner of Schofield Barracks and put them under guard.

When you count in Japanese, it's ichi, ni, san, yon. The first generation from Japan, the immigrants were called Issei, the second, Nisei, Sansei, and so on.

The Nisei were second generation Japanese Americans born in the U.S. They were citizens and therefore could not be discharged.

However, fearing the Japanese would launch a second attack on Hawaii, the War Department was concerned of the possibility that they would be dressed in American uniforms to cause confusion.

The War Department decided to evacuate the 1,500 Nisei National Guardsmen from the islands. They were designated the 100th Battalion and sent to Fort McCoy, Wis., in June 1942 for combat training.

After these soldiers left Hawaii, the rest of the Japanese American community in Hawaii clamored to help and continued to lobby for the opportunity to serve their country.

In January 1943, President Roosevelt commissioned an all Nisei combat team noting, "The principle on which this country was founded and by which it has always been governed is that Americanism is a matter of the mind and heart; Americanism is not, and never was, a matter of race or ancestry."

The Army called for 1,500 volunteers from Hawaii. Nearly 10,000 Nisei responded and the Army inducted over 2,600.

Service to America was obviously of great significance to Nisei families. Those who were rejected were devastated.

One who was accepted was Lt. Sadami Katahara, my father. He had just had his first son in December 1942. His father asked him if he knew what "on" meant?

My dad replied, "Yes, 'on' requires that when one person is helped by another, he incurs a debt that is never settled. One must repay it at every opportunity."

His father told him: "America has been good to us. You must do your duty and repay this country."

Many Asian cultures are concerned with "saving face," and this includes the Japanese culture.

The Nisei were raised to avoid bringing shame, or "hagi," on their families. When sons were bid farewell, a common exhortation from their immigrant parents was not to bring shame, or hagi, on the family name.

The 442nd Regimental Combat Team was formed with highly motivated Nisei in April 1943.

Combat training took place at Camp Shelby, Miss., where the 100th Battalion joined the 442nd Regimental Combat Team and they earned the reputation of being hard-working and high spirited.

When the leaders of the unit experienced difficulties, a simple threat to notify the soldier's parents that would bring "hagi" on the family name was all that was needed for remotivation.

Gen. George Marshall heard the favorable reports and offered the unit to commanders in Europe.

Gen. Eisenhower's staff turned them down but Lt. Gen. Mark W.

them down, but Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the 5th Army in Italy said he would take anybody that would fight.

They fought with courage and determination from Anzio to Rome and beyond. They were the key unit who rescued the Lost Battalion.

Thus, the 100th and 442nd became the most decorated unit of the war, earning over 18,000 individual and presidential citations, 52 Distinguished Service Crosses, 1 Distinguished Service Medal, 588 Silver Stars, 22 Legions of Merit, 4,000 Bronze Stars and over 9,500 Purple Hearts.

To just give you an example of the casualties suffered, the 100th Battalion landed in Italy with 1,300 men in September 1943. Just five months later, after the Battle of Monte Cassino, it could only muster 521 soldiers. Gen. George Marshall commented after the war, "I will say about the Japanese fighting in these units we had: they were superb! That word correctly describes it: superb! They took terrific casualties. They showed rare courage and tremendous fighting spirit. Not too much can be said of the performance of those battalions in Europe and everybody wanted them ... in the operations, and we used them quite dramatically in the great advance in Italy."

Those soldiers set the stage for people like me. They fought not just the Germans, but ignorance and prejudice as well. They proved their loyalty and worthiness to be Americans.

Shortly after I graduated from the Air Force Academy, my grandfather asked me about my future in his broken English ... "You get chance, you get chance?"

He wanted to know whether I would have the opportunity to succeed on the mainland, in the Air Force. My message is, yes we all "get chance."

Our voices are the voices of the new millennium. To paraphrase Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., it's up to us to see that everyone is judged by the content of their character, and not the color of their skin.

If we do this, then everyone will have the chance to reach their highest potential. I think grandfather would agree: Yes, we all "get chance" in America. That is the voice of the new millennium that I hear.

Everyone who owns a blue suit must participate in Training from the Airman's Manual

The Military Training Day will be conducted on the first Friday of every month as mandated by Lt. Gen. Leslie F. Kenne, Electronic Systems Center commander. The training for June 2 is:

☐ Airman's Manual, Section 3, Set Up -- Passive Defense, Sandbagging, Defensive Fighting Positions, Fire Protection, Field Command and Control, and Field Communications

Did you know ... that passive defense includes any measure you take to lessen damage from enemy attack to your installation. Most measures should be quickly executed, inexpensive and require minimum manpower and material.

Officers discuss AF doctrine in call

by 1st Lt. David L. Englin

ESC Public Affairs

The Electronic System Center's officers converged at the base movie theater May 3 for an overview of current Air Force doctrine at an Officers' Call by Lt. Gen. Leslie F. Kenne, ESC commander.

General Kenne invited two officers from the Air Force Doctrine Center at Maxwell AFB, Ala., to brief ESC's officers on the basics of Air Force doctrine and on some of the issues involved with applying that doctrine in a joint warfighting environment.

Col. Chris Warner, director of doctrine applications, and Lt. Col. Robert W. Christensen, deputy director for doctrine development, briefed General Kenne when she visited the Air Force Doctrine Center in February. According to General Kenne, she thought their presentation was important enough to bring them to Hanscom so ESC's officers could benefit from it.

"Doctrine is a topic that is vital to the Air Force and to each officer's professional development," said General Kenne. "It really is key to the success of the Air Force because it is the basic set of beliefs about aerospace power that melds us together as a single force. This is important because you need to be able to talk to your colleagues in the other services about the big picture of the Air Force, to understand what the doctrinal issues are among the services, and to coherently explain aerospace power to your next-door neighbor."

Colonel Christensen began by giving an overview of the fundamentals of Air Force doctrine. He focused on Air Force Doctrine Document 1: Air Force Basic Doctrine, which sets out general doctrinal guidance for applying aerospace forces across the full range of military operations. The discussion included the Principles of War and the Tenets of Aerospace Power, as well as a variety of well-tested "best practices" for issues like targeting and command and control.

Colonel Warner used historical references and personal anecdotes to discuss the development of joint doctrine and the challenges it has created for airmen. According to Colonel Warner, joint doctrine came directly from Army doctrine, which has caused doctrinal conflicts and tensions because of the different perspective the Air Force has from its surface-based counterparts.

"The battlefield looks very different from 15,000 feet or from low-earth orbit," said Colonel Warner. "The Army is concerned with what's over the next ridge when we can maneuver at 600 knots and all over the area of operations."

While both Colonel Warner and Colonel Christensen discussed the Air Force's preferred way of fighting, Colonel Warner emphasized that the only decisive force in any operation is the joint force.

Information about Air Force doctrine can be found on the Air Force Doctrine Center's web site at www.doctrine.af.mil.

Chief uses enlisted calls to spread the word

by Airman 1st Class Theresa IdeESC Public Affairs

Hanscom's enlisted force participated in enlisted calls May 3 through 5 at the Ballroom in the Enlisted Club.

These quarterly calls are open forums which allow enlisted members a chance to address concerns and make comments to Electronic Systems Center's Command Chief Master Sgt. Frank Holmes.

"We have many challenges directly affecting our enlisted corps ahead of us not only here within our Hanscom community but across the Air Force," said Chief Holmes. "[Enlisted calls are] a great opportunity to consolidate and work on those challenges."

Lt. Gen. Leslie F. Kenne, ESC commander, opened the first call by stressing the importance of core values, professional development and community involvement.

Chief Holmes then presented a concept recruiting film and explained the new Air Force symbol and the way it represents the strength of the enlisted as well as the rest of the Air Force.

"When you look at the logo, one of the first things you see is the representation of the enlisted chevrons. But there is also the Hap Arnold insignia and many other representations of tradition, our officer corps and our Air Force," said Chief Holmes.

He encouraged the attendees to take the time and look up the meaning of the new symbol, which can be found on the web at www.af.mil/airforcestory.

Attendees were also reminded that every Air Force member is also a recruiter, so conforming to standards and representing the Air Force positively is something every member should strive toward both on and off duty.

"Every one of you should be extremely proud of the part you play in our Air Force," said Chief Holmes. "Take the time to tell those folks considering an Air Force career about the positive experiences you've had. Talk to those folks considering staying with us and tell them all the positive things you've enjoyed. We can make a huge impact on recruiting and retention if we take the time to consider just how fortunate we are and tell others."

The focal point of the Call was centered on involvement. By participating in "professional organizations," such as the Patriot Enlisted Association or the Air Force Sergeants' Association, and volunteering within the community, enlisted members will become better, well-rounded individuals, said Chief Holmes. Something which benefits the individual, the community and the Air Force.

"On an average, only 21 percent of our Enlisted Corps belongs to professional organizations," said Chief Holmes. "[Some of] these organizations are the ones lobbying up at Congress, along with our senior leadership, to make the positive changes we identify.

"At 21 percent, how strong of a voice do you think we have? If we could double or triple ... the number of people supporting these professional organizations, it's fairly clear to me, our voices would be much stronger.

"Involvement, especially in these times of reduced manning, is absolutely essential to our community. I realize everyone is busy, and we're asking everyone to do more. The impact each of you have in volunteer activities is far reaching."

Visiting veterans at local hospitals and participating in the base honor guard were just a few volunteer opportunities discussed.

"Visits to the local VA hospitals can be only described as wonderful," said Chief Holmes. "The time you spend with veterans who have served their country with dignity and honor, and find themselves in a hospital, has tremendous effects on their morale and inner self-worth."

The chief, a member of the Patriot Honor Guard, explained the feeling of participating in a recent detail.

"I was extremely proud to have accompanied our Hanscom honor guard on my first detail," said Chief Holmes. "The pride and professionalism displayed by our folks was incredible. But even more than that was the absolute pride our civilian hosts displayed for us being there and representing our Air Force.

"There are many other opportunities to get involved, and all of them make a big difference."

Chief Holmes concluded the enlisted call with an invitation to anyone that needs a problem resolved or a question answered to come and see him.

"It has been my absolute pleasure to work with each and every member of Team Hanscom, from the enlisted corps, the officers and our civilian members, we are all part of our great community. Cheers to each of you and please let me know how I can help."

Reform week set for May 22 to 26

ESC Acquisition Support Team

From May 22 to 26, the Electronic Systems Center Acquisition Support Team will be sponsoring Acquisition Logistics Reform Week.

Dr. Lawrence Delaney, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Acquisition, and Raymond Orr, Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Installations and Logistics, will be joining representatives from industry for a panel discussion May 23.

The scope of this panel will be Product Support Partnerships and attendance will be by invitation only.

All ESC acquisition personnel are required to attend a minimum of eight hours acquisition training during this week of events.

There will be two mandatory sessions prescribed for Air Force people; Lightning Bolt 99-3; Market Analysis and Priced Based Acquisition, and Lightning Bolt 99-7; Product Support Partnerships.

For convenience, there are two of each sessions scheduled at Hanscom and two of each at MITRE in Bedford, Mass.

The remaining four hours of acquisition training can be obtained from the numerous elective sessions that will be provided.

As plans are finalized, additional details of events and registration can be found at http://esc.hanscom.af.mil/ACQDEV/Escu/AcquisitionHome.html.

If you have any questions contact Tyrone Frey at 3-8634.

Voting assistance site opens

by Tech. Sgt. Scott Lewis

ESC Public Affairs

The Electronic Systems Center has unveiled a voting assistance web site to help inform the base through the distribution of voting information.

1st Lt. Geoffrey Barrow, MILSATCOM Terminal System Program Office, built the site which is located on ESC's CenterNet web site, http://esc.hanscom.af.mil/vote.

"I came up with the idea during a meeting concerning how to get voting information to as many folks as possible, which included discussion on the voting hotline [3-VOTE]," said Lt. Barrow.

Lt. Barrow admitted that he hadn't written in HTML in a while and was a little rusty.

"The last time I had done this was in college," he said. "I spent around two days brushing up on the language and then three days to create the site."

The entire process took about three and a half weeks.

"The longest part of the effort was getting the site space," he added. "I worked with the CenterNet [staff] to do this for around three weeks."

He also made sure to add that the site is continually under construction and that he welcomes comments or suggestions on how to improve it.

The key to this site is the ability for the user to contact his or her Unit Voting Counselor or the entire voting council about any voting questions or concerns via e-mail.

Hanscom Scouts help clean up base

by Senior Airman Jason J. Ide ESC Public Affairs

Esc rusiic riiiuns

Cub Scout Pack 173 came out in force to clean up the bases streams and wetlands May 6.

"The clean up was a great opportunity for parents and their sons to spend time with nature and earn the Cub Scout World Conservation Award," said Art Roy, Cub Scout coordinator. "The sun was shining, the birds were chirping and the Cub scouts were doing their best to help the environment."

The pack met at the elementary school where Mr. Roy gave a safety briefing and handed out rubber gloves, then split the people up into smaller groups so that the large number of people wouldn't be a risk to the plant life.

There were 20 Cub Scouts, 18 parents and five siblings that came to help clean up Hanscom's streams.

The adults were given rubber boots and walked down the middle of the stream throwing the trash and junk to the streams edge.

The 66th Civil Engineer Squadron's Heavy Repair section supplied a one-ton stake-bed truck to haul the junk to the Hanscom Recycle Center.

"Myself and Tom Wheeler sank up to our waist in water and muck that 'looked' about six inches deep," said Mr. Roy. "It's hard to get out of mucky water when your hip boots are full."

The cubs were given trash bags and picked up trash along the stream's edge.

The Cub Scouts retrieved three chairs, two bicycles, a printer, a tire, a television, a sled, one or more balls from just about every sport, toys, shoes, traffic cones, shovels, plywood and dozens of trash bags of litter from the wetlands of Hanscom. By the end of the day the truck was heaped with garbage.

"The Cubs did a lot of walking, picking up, getting wet and having fun, but most of all Cub Scout Pack 173 did a lot of good for the environment on Hanscom," said Mr. Roy.

The idea for the clean up came when Kathy Schnepf, Pack 173's cub master, was walking her son to school one morning and noticed a lot of litter in the woods behind the elementary school.

At the next pack committee meeting Ms. Schnepf suggested the pack do a cleanup of the area and at the same time earn the scouts the Conservation Award.

After the pack decided to help they went to CE to ask permission. "Bill Standfield, [66th Environmental Flight,] loved the idea that the Cub Scouts wanted to clean up the environment," said Mr. Roy.

According to Cub Scout officials the cleanup was a big success.

Association plans memorial golf tournament

by Kevin Gilmartin ESC Public Affairs

The Lexington-Concord Chapter of the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association is dedicating its annual spring golf tournament to the memory of Elmer Fuller, a former Electronic Systems Center Director of Information Management.

Mr. Fuller was an active member of the AFCEA chapter from 1978 until his death last summer.

As a high-ranking civilian at Hanscom from 1978 to 1988, he served as director of information management, and later, as deputy chief of staff for ESC.

In 1988, he left government service for private industry. He served in a variety of leadership positions with AFCEA, including president and chairman of the board of directors.

Mr. Fuller worked on many golf tournament committees for the chapter, chaired several of the organization's symposium committees, and served for several years on the Nomination Committee.

His wife, Pat Thomas-Fuller, is currently president of the Lexington-Concord chapter, and his son, Jim Fuller, is an active member of the chapter.

"Elmer Fuller was a moving force in AFCEA who was always available to provide guidance and direction," said Claire Goulet, vice president for Operations and Administration. "While we will always miss Elmer, we will never forget him or the great impact he had on our organization."

This year's tournament is scheduled for June 6 at both the Marlboro Country Club in Marlboro, Mass. and the Wedgewood Pines Country Club in nearby Stow, Mass.

There will be a "scramble" and a "play your own ball" format at both courses to provide the widest opportunity for participation.

An awards dinner will be held in the Marlboro Country Club ballroom beginning around 2:30 p.m.

Cost for government employees and military members is $50 for current AFCEA members, and $70 for nonmembers, which includes a one-year membership to AFCEA. All entry fees go towards expenses, plus a contribution to the AFCEA Fellowship and

Elmer Fuller

ROTC scholarship programs.

Each year, beginning with this year's tournament, the Elmer Fuller Trophy will be awarded to the low gross Scramble team at Marlboro Country Club.

For information or to register, contact Ms. Goulet at (781) 221-1580, or e-mail her at cgoulet@acsdefense.com.

Environmental Compliance Assessment program coming by 1st Lt. Brian Smith 66th Civil Engineer Squadron Environmental Flight

Hanscom is scheduled to conduct an Environmental Compliance Assessment and Management Program June 5 through 9.

Volunteers and environmental professionals will assess the level of compliance with federal, state, local and DoD environmental regulations that affect many activities performed at Hanscom.

Volunteers for this year's assessment team are needed.

Military and civilians from all backgrounds can volunteer if they have their supervisor's approval.

ECAMP is an opportunity to increase knowledge about Base's mission and environmental concerns.

Training for team members unfamiliar with conducting an ECAMP will be provided May 24 to 26.

A successful ECAMP evaluation relies on making all areas accessible and ensuring that each organization has knowledgeable personnel available.

Assessment categories include air, hazardous materials, hazardous waste, solid waste, water quality, waste water, cultural and natural resources, pesticides, petroleum, oil and lubricants, storage tanks, toxic substances and other environmental problems.

To volunteer or request information, contact the Environmental Flight at 3-1582.

The Edith Nourse Rogers Memorial Veterans Hospital in Bedford is once again looking for students to participate in its summer volunteer program.

The program will run from July 3 through Aug. 25, and there will be an orientation day June 27.

"The veterans love seeing the young people," said Debbie Murchie, a volunteer service specialist with the hospital. "It really brightens their day. They don't often get to see younger people, and when they do, they really connect with them."

For the student volunteers, this is a chance to obtain valuable career and community service experience, according to Ms. Murchie.

Volunteers will generally work as nurses' assistants. Some administrative office work assignments are also available.

"For the most part, they'll bring wheelchair bound patients down to the cafeteria or outside," said Ms. Murchie. "It's just great for the patients to be able to get out of the wards."

Students will be asked to volunteer from one to three days per week, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. The hospital will provide lunch each day.

The hospital, which is located within a few miles of Hanscom on Springs Road, will be conducting interviews June 5 through June 23. Students 13 or older are eligible to participate.

To schedule an interview, call 687-2352 or 687-2422.

This program represents just one opportunity for volunteer service to the Rogers Memorial Veterans Hospital.

Hanscom volunteers participate annually in National Volunteer Week in February and through monthly "Adopt a Ward" visits organized by Master Sgt. Guy Case of the 66th Mission Support Squadron.

The next "Adopt a Ward" visit is scheduled for Thursday.

Those interested in volunteering should contact Sergeant Case at 3-2782.

JPPSO says no 'tanks'

by Rebecca A. Michaud JPPSO-NORTHEAST

Shipping and storing propane tanks (of any type, including purged) in a members personal property shipment is no longer authorized.

Recent fires and explosions in household goods moving vans have resulted in new stringent safety regulations, for shipping and labeling of refillable propane tanks.

Service members may contact a propane dealer for disposal instructions.

Any agreement for movement, made between the member and carrier for shipping of "purged" propane tanks prior to May 1, is authorized.

Shipments already picked up, and that are either at the agent's warehouse, in storage or enroute to final destination will be transported for final delivery.

will hand out candy to all the children along the route."

The parade starts at 10 a.m. at the 66th Security Forces Squadron Headquarters, then will proceed south on Eglin Street to Vandenberg Drive. The parade will then turn right onto Vandenberg and turn left onto Langley Road. Patrols will make a complete loop through Scott Circle before returning to Vandenberg, then they will turn right onto Marrett Street and will turn right onto Ent Road. The parade will travel West on Ent and turn right into Patriot Village on Heritage Road passing through Liberty Lane, Constitution Drive and will return to Ent, upon which the parade will turn right and proceed to Hickam Lane. The parade will turn right and pass by Pope Terrace, circling back to Hickam and then Ent again. The parade will then head west to Patterson and proceed to Offutt Road where they will pass Andrews Circle, head back to Patterson Road and back to

Upon reaching Ent, patrols will turn right and leave the base housing area, returning back to headquarters to complete the parade.

All money raised during this week will go directly to the squadron's Defender Club to help offset prices for plaques, the annual Christmas party and to help pay for the meals for civilian police officers who come to the vehicle parade.

All week long, Security Forces members will be handing out community surveys at the base

"These surveys help us help the base populace take a bite out of crime and protect the public. If all the base residents and civilians took a few minutes to give us their feedback, it would give us a unique perspective on security issues which affect all base residents, employees and visitors, ultimately benefiting the whole community" said Sergeant Sparks.

In addition, the Security Forces will conduct auto etching by appointment only. This process permanently marks a vehicle identification number onto all glass on the vehicle and can lower vehicle liability insurance costs up to 15 percent.

For an appointment call Staff Sgt. Jeffrey LaRoe, 66th Security Forces Squadron, at 3-3727.

Air Force seeks former 'sister service' members

New authorization allows compatible career fields to enter

Randolph AFB, Texas — The Air Force is opening its doors to former sister service members who qualify to join.

Up to now, former soldiers, sailors, Marines and members of the Coast Guard could only join the Air Force if they held specialties in a very narrow series of career fields. The new authorization permits all eligible people with compatible career fields to enter the Air Force.

Training opportunities are also available for former servicemembers trained in specialties not currently used by the Air Force. "These training opportunities are primarily available in the mechanical and electrical career fields," said Master Sgt. Jeff Moore, chief of Air Force Recruiting Service's prior service program.

Honorably discharged veterans who have been out of the military no longer than 6 years and have no more than 12 years of total active military service can find out more by contacting their local Air Force recruiter, or by calling 1-800-423-USAF.

Air Force Shooting Team seeks sharp shooters

Randolph AFB, Texas — The Air Force has a long-standing record of excellence in competitive shooting, dating back to 1956 when Gen. Curtis LeMay established the U.S. Air Force Marksmanship School at Lackland AFB, Texas. Since that time, the Air Force Shooting Team has brought home medals in competitions such as the Olympics, Pan American Games, and numerous world and national championships.

Marksmanship is an inherent military skill that is instilled in all Air Force members early in their careers. For some, this is more than simply a required skill; it is a way of life. The Air Force Shooting Team demonstrates the military's commitment to the preservation and advancement of marksmanship. It consists of activeduty members participating in nine different disciplines: action pistol, American skeet, highpower rifle, international pistol, international rifle, international skeet, international trap, national pistol, and running target.

While most team members provide their own equipment, there is a limited quantity of weapons and ammunition made available for their use.

The Air Force Shooting Team

relies heavily on the support of the commanders, supervisors, and coworkers of each team member to make the program a success. Team members, selected throughout the Air Force, remain assigned to their current duty location and are periodically placed on TDY status to train for and represent the Air Force in competitions.

Many of these competitions pit Air Force shooters against both military and civilian marksmen in national, state, regional, and interservice competitions throughout the country. At the international level, Air Force shooters may find themselves facing some of the top ranked shooters in the world.

Periodically, members will conduct training clinics at universities, high schools and local clubs. Through public contact and associations developed during competitions, Air Force shooters play a direct and important role in enhancing the image of the Air Force both at home and abroad.

Active-duty members interested in applying for the Air Force Shooting Team should submit an AF Form 303, Request For USAF Specialized Sports Training, to their local base fitness center. The application is hould list all competitive shooting experience, match results, national rankings, and any other qualifications that may be beneficial to the selection process.

Base gym offers fitness opportunities

by J.C. Corcoran

Services Management

"As a member of the Fitness Center staff, my job and my goal, for the people of Hanscom is to continue teaching the importance of fitness and exercise to as many as who will listen."

Such is the philosophy of one of the most familiar characters that lives and breathes physical conditioning at the Hanscom Fitness Center.

His name is Mike Abruzese and he's been a vital staff member of the Fitness and Sports Center for the past five years.

A native of North Reading, Mass., Mr. Abruzese is a graduate of North Reading High School.

His educational credits include a wide variety of physical fitness certifications like the American College of Sport Medicine, the Coopers Institute, Air Force Strength Course, attendance at Wentworth Institute as well as Salem State.

Mr. Abruzese has become a very familiar face to the patrons of the Fitness and Sports Center. When he's not providing physical instruction to someone, he may be found keeping a watchful eye in the weight room, or just roaming the center looking for ways and programs to improve the service.

taking part in several of the intramural programs conducted by the Fitness Center.

"Another of my goals is to expand the Fitness Center and to acquire more of the necessary pieces of equipment needed to keep up with the fast growing industry of health and fitness. Since my arrival, we've really come a long way here at Hanscom. With help from all levels of command, the Fitness and Sports Center has improved 100-fold," said Mr. Abruzese.

According to Mr. Abruzese, "The entire staff of the Fitness Center is dedicated to providing the best in service to our customers. All of us want to provide as many fitness and sports programs as possible to meet the needs of our customers. With the latest equipment, and a staff that is trained in all aspects of Fitness, as well as sports programs, we can meet that mission.'

Right now, Mr. Abruzese and the staff are busy doing all the preparations for one of the major events put on by the Fitness Center, the 11th Annual Battle Road Run to be held May 13th.

For those who may be new to Hanscom and unfamiliar with this event, it's a point to point course that starts near the historic "Old North Bridge" in
